

To whomever stumbles across this candidate statement, I'm not the best at introductions (clearly).

Moving from South India was easily one of the most challenging things I've done in my life, trying to win this would be there in that list too. In the six months I've been here, like every other eager student, I signed up to almost all the clubs, and try my hardest to be present, balancing uni work and part time jobs. Now I am a proud member of the events management club, and looking forward to opening a foosball club soon because I spend most of my time in that games room. I have, however, been very consistent at attending TRU generator events, you can check out my perfect unmatched record of having been the only one to attend all events (ever since I knew about the existence of it). Also, because I'm so intrigued by all the people they bring and all the networking opportunities, which will hopefully lead me to running a creative agency of my own someday!

I love people. In the most non-creepy way possible. I love the little interactions, the exciting new conversations, the cute memories made. And that's why I'm here. To put my extroversion and people-skills to good use. So get to know me and help me get to know you and your needs together. Cheers!

Rohini Ranganatha, PBD in Marketing